

SALT LAKE society is noted for its hosts and hostesses, almost equaling in fame the old-time southern hospitality, when the dinner bell announced to all within its hearing that there was room and to spare at the "colonial" soft curls.

Although the past summer has been fairly quiet, the precedent established in former years has not suffered. The standard and appointments of even the smaller companies could easily hold their own with those of any part of the east or Europe.

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating," so is the appreciation of the host or hostess, judged by the attendance at their functions. The appearance of cool weather has left no room for doubt in that respect, for the size and magnificence of several recent affairs attest to the fact.

The influx of prominent citizens, who have spent the summer at the resorts and watering places, has given the expected impetus to the social life, and now the fall whirl of events is on in earnest with that pleasant rivalry between our peerless hosts and hostesses.

Weddings have by no means been a secondary consideration in the social calendar, for the present is witnessing the culmination of a number of affairs that have been of more or less interest. The near future holds in store a few matrimonial events that will vie even with those of the past.

In one of James L. Ford's sketches, he said: "After all, I said to myself, with the magnificent conceit of manhood, brains should not marry brains, but rather soft curls, good living and the dimples that come and go with the loveliness and laughter. Nor should the sordid thought of gold enter into the scheme."

These views being advanced some years ago, leads to the belief that Ford had not taken on any of the serious ideas governing the "love-light" seekers in this international section.

A la altitude, the cool weather receives the credit, or blame, as the occasion requires, for another source of activity, the inauguration of the club season.

Minerva has invested in her fall thinking cap, and if one may judge by the programs of the various organizations, it might be said that the creation will set the pace for the fashionable millinery in other club centers.

With the high places held in the General Federation and other national organizations by Salt Lake women, it is apparent that Utah is not only making itself known, but is taking a place of consequence with its older sisters and making them "sit up and take notice."

Week in Society

Miss Mary Halloran entertained her bridesmaids at a luncheon Saturday at her home. Covers were laid for the Misses Margaret Dunn, Mercy Lewis, Lillian Lane, Mildred Eccles, Margaret McClure and Florence Halloran. Pink roses were used in the table decorations.

Mrs. D. C. Jackling presided over a handsomely appointed dinner at the Country club Saturday evening. There were dainty place cards for six, and the decorations were in autumn flowers.

Other hostesses at the Country club

Saturday evening were: Mrs. Jack Keith, Mrs. Fred Hale, Mrs. George Y. Wallace, Mrs. L. L. Savage, Mrs. T. G. Griffen, Mrs. T. W. Boyer and Miss Kate Williams.

The finals in the intermountain tennis tournament were the feature of Saturday at the Country club, and the occasion for a number of small dinners. During the week the games have been the center of interest, and now that they are over bridge will again take the floor.

Mrs. J. F. Nibley entertained eleven tables of bridge Friday in honor of Miss Alice Nibley, whose marriage will take place in the near future. The decorations were very attractive. In the music room asters were used, and in the living room and dining room nasturtiums carried out the color scheme of yellow. Miss Ren Nibley poured coffee and was assisted in the dining room by the Misses Edith Hunsberry, Rhon Spencer, Vinnie Burrows and Margaret Taylor. Those who assisted Mrs. Nibley in receiving were Mrs. Harold Perry and Mrs. Joseph Howell.
